You can purchase and renovate your Recreational Fishing License or request an exemption from payment thereof, where appropriate, quickly and easily on line or by visiting our regional offices.

By visiting our offices: any Fisheries Service's offices in Chile or at other offices that sell licenses, prior submission of your identification card and disability certificate. If you choose to purchase the license at our offices, payment must be made in cash in Chilean pesos based on the value of the UF (a unit of account that is used in Chile) on that day.

On line: You can purchase and renovate your Recreational Fishing License or request an exemption from payment thereof online at our Recreational Fishing Portal by selecting the License Purchase tab once you have registered as a client by completing the relevant application form.

The details in the application form are verified by the Civil Registry and Identification Service in order to authorize exemption from payment, where appropriate.

You can pay for your new Recreational Fishing License using the electronic payment system linked to the payment portal of the General Treasury Department.

Payments using this system must be made in Chilean pesos based on the value of the UF on that day, using bank credit cards or retail store credit cards or deducted from your current account.
